EVICCTIONS AT THE OLD POST OFFICE BUILDING IN DIEPKLOOF

Community Members are embarking on a campaign to evict people who have occupied the Old Post office building in Zone 1 Diepkloof.

The building has been abandoned for years now. People who are believed to be illegal foreigners have occupied the building and turned it into a residential area.

The state of the building is not in good condition. It is not clear how did these people end up living in the building and where do they pay rent to, however there are speculations about the involvement of the some officials who are collecting rent.

FIRE CAUSED BY LOADSHEDDING IN A SHACK

A man in Orlando East nearly lost his life on Sunday the 9th January. When power was restored after load reduction, his shack caught fire due to the powerful restoration process caused by load reduction. The victim was asleep when the fire broke out, He narrowly escaped and sustained burn injuries was rushed to hospital

He lost everything in the fire, all his belonging were burnt. Community Members came to the rescue of the victim and assisted with few essentials. People who would like to lend help are more than welcome to assist

THE BATTLE OF ISANDLWANA

The month of December we commemorate 143 years of the Battle of Isandlwana, we remember the fallen African heroes who died in the war defending our land and freedom. The battle of Isandlwana and other resistance wars between Africans and European settlers were wars of freedom.

Date of the Battle of Isandlwana
22nd January 1879

Place of the Battle of Isandlwana
Enquthu in KZN.

Combatants at the Battle of Isandlwana
Zulu army against a force of invaders
British troops, Natal units and African levies.

Commanders at the Battle of Isandlwana:

The AmaZulu Army: Chief Ntshingwayo
kaMahole Khoza
The British Army : Lieutenant Colonel
Durnford

Winner of the Battle of Isandlwana:
The British force was wiped out by the Zulu Army.

The Zulu warriors were formed in regiments by age, their standard equipment the shield and stabbing spear. The formation for their attack, described as the 'horns of the beast', was said to have been devised by Inkosi uShaka, the Zulu King who established Zulu kingdom in Southern Africa.

Induna uNtshingwayo kaMahole (seated) Zulu commander at the Battle of Isandlwana on 22nd January 1879 in the Zulu War

The main body of the army delivered a frontal assault, called the 'loins', while the 'horns' spread out behind each of the enemy's flanks and delivered the secondary and often fatal attack in the enemy's rear.

The regular British infantry were equipped with the breach loading single shot Martini- Henry rifle and bayonet. The British infantry wore red tunics, white solar topee helmets and dark blue trousers, with red piping down the side. The irregular mounted units wore blue tunics and slouch hats.

The battle of Isandlwana stunned the world. It was unthinkable that a 'native' army armed substantially with stabbing weapons could defeat troops of a western power armed with modern rifles and artillery, let alone wipe it out.

The Zulu War began in early January 1879 as a simple campaign of expansion. British colonial officials and the commander-in-chief in South Africa, Lord Chelmsford, considered the independent Zulu Kingdom ruled by Cetshwayo a threat to the British colony of Natal, with which it shared a long border along the Buffalo River.

In December 1878, the British authorities delivered an ultimatum to Inkosi u-Cetshwayo, requiring him to give up a group of Zulus accused of murdering a party of British subjects. In the absence of a satisfactory response, Chelmsford attacked Zululand on 11th January 1879

Chelmsford's previous wars in South Africa did not prepare him for the highly aggressive form of warfare practised by the Zulu Army.

On 21st January 1879, Major Dartnell led a mounted reconnaissance in the direction of the advance. He encountered the Zulu Army in strength.

Bara Hospital calls on families to come identify their loved ones

Baragwanath Hospital is looking for family members to go and identify bodies of deceased patients from the hospital. According to the hospital spokesperson Nkosiyethu Mazibuko, some of the deceased were picked up from the streets and thus the hospital has no particular addresses to at least trace the families.

For those who had provided addresses, the hospital has reached out to those who stay at the addresses however, they found that some of the deceased were tenants or not known at those addresses.

The hospital has provided a list, which they say after a set period of time, if the families don't come forward to claim their loved ones, the bodies become the responsibility of the state and the state handles the arrangements of a pauper's burial.

THE DO'S AND DON'T'S OF RUNNING FRANCHISE

Don't buy a restaurant franchise if you like to go to bed early. That's the succinct advice of Gerrie van Biljon, executive director of Business Partners, who says the industry's growth has encouraged many entrepreneurs to explore the opportunities the sector has to offer.

However, he adds, due to the many types of businesses that operate within the sector, should franchisees want to thrive, they need to ensure their personalities and skills sets are suited to the type of business with which they are looking to partner.

Did you know that the franchising industry comprises 11% of the total South African gross domestic product? Indeed, it has become a well-regulated sector over the past few years and can no longer be ignored. And it is a fact that many franchises fail because franchise owners buy into businesses to which their lifestyles are not suited.

Van Biljon says that although this may seem obvious, he is often surprised by how many first-time franchisees make the mistake of buying a franchise that simply does not fit their lifestyle. "In the world of startup franchising, it can easily be a fatal mistake to make because there is so little room for error. Very few people who buy their first franchise have the resources for a second chance once they've found out that the franchise they had set their heart on is actually not the right fit," he says.

Lifestyle preference is only one of three important factors that prospective franchisees must consider to make sure the franchise they choose is the right fit for them. The other two are skills and personality

"The skills set of the entrepreneur is the most important," says van Biljon. Firstly, there is the technical know-how related to the specific industry, such as a beauty salon or a service station. Entrepreneurs should choose a franchise for which they either have a natural skill set, or one in which they have had previous experience."

Van Biljon says that irrespective of the industry, a franchisee will always have to be a jack-of-all-trades to a certain extent. "It is important to possess a good general hybrid of skills, as often the franchisee is expected to fill the human resources role, the sales role, the office-manager role and be the tea lady."

When it comes to franchising, you can't break the rules - and they can be extensive. "Franchising is a recipe that requires strict adherence by franchisees, otherwise the service or product will start differing from branch to branch, and the collective power of the brand will suffer.

If the franchisee is not somebody who likes to operate under a strict set of rules, then franchising may not be the correct career path," van Biljon says.

Your personality is also important "Prospective franchisees need to be honest with themselves about their personality," says van Biljon.

For example, a generally introverted person should stay away from retail or service-heavy businesses such as restaurants. Similarly, a sociable, outgoing personality will become frustrated in a desk-bound business where there is little interaction with clients."

When it comes to running a successful franchise, common sense is a vital ingredient. However, says van Biljon, "the unknown usually lies on the side of the franchise, and a first-time franchisee who knows himself well could still be in for a nasty surprise when it turns out that the franchise requires an approach, attitude or trait the owner simply isn't comfortable with."

There are certainly risks involved, just as there are with any business venture, but at the end of the day, running a franchise can be a very exciting, rewarding and profitable experience.

Watch out for one of the new tricks that criminals are doing lately.

SCAM ALERT 1

You will get a call from someone claiming they are from the Bank, They will inform you that someone is trying to buy something online using your card details, and they suspect that it is fraud. You will be be given all your information i.e your identity number. They will then ask if you would like them to stop the transaction, if you respond yes they will then proceed to ask you for your card expiry number. DO NOT GIVE THEM ANY INFORMATION. CONTACT YOUR BANK IMMEDIATELY TO MAKE SURE YOUR ACCOUNT IS SAFE

SCAM ALERT 2

A person will call you, and tell you that they have made a mistake by depositing money into your account. They will ask you to reverse the money. Even if you do not agree to their request. Criminals have a way to access your account and steal money in your account. You should immediately contact your Bank or go to your Bank App and stop your card/account. Because they will reverse the money and they will be able to withdraw money from your account.

HOW TO BUY CRYPTOCURRENCY IN SOUTH AFRICA

Users looking to buy Bitcoin in South Africa can do so from one of the many exchanges available in the country. However, buyers should keep in mind that they should first get a wallet to store the Bitcoin. In case you don't have a wallet, you can go through our guide on the best Bitcoin and cryptocurrency wallets.

Once you have a wallet in place, you can choose from the likes of Luno, Coinmama, CoinCorner, Bitit, and a few other options to buy Bitcoin from. There are different pros and cons of all the exchanges. Luno, for instance, allows users to instantly buy Bitcoin, is known for free deposits, and provides users with really high limits based on their verification level. Users, however, are advised against storing their Bitcoin in the Luno wallet as online reviews suggest due to certain concerns such as potential security flaws and long deposit and withdrawal times.

Another way to buy Bitcoin in South Africa is through Bitcoin ATMs, though there aren't many of them available in the country. South Africa has a total of five Bitcoin ATMs spread across the four cities of Cape Town, Pretoria, Johannesburg, and Nelspruit Mbombela). These ATMs allow users to buy Bitcoin using cash in a quick and easy manner as it doesn't require sign-ups and identity verification with exchanges, which might take up a few days to go through.

WATCH VIDEO EXPLAINING CRYPTOCURRENCY HERE

However, the drawback of buying Bitcoin through an ATM is the high transaction fees that range between 5% and 10%.

More importantly, South Africa gives users more than a few choices where they can spend their Bitcoin. In fact, cryptocurrency exchange Luno reports that there are thousands of merchants that accept Bitcoin in the country, including stationery seller Applebee, fashion clothing provider BLVD Boutique, and even hula hoop performers. In the end, it can be concluded that Bitcoin is in a healthy state in South Africa and it should continue flourishing thanks to the government's proactive and positive approach toward developing the country's cryptocurrency system.

WHAT IS AN ALKALINE DIET?

The idea behind the alkaline diet, also known as the alkaline acid diet or alkaline ash diet, is that your food can affect pH levels in the body. Your pH level, in turn, affects your overall health and well-being.

What does pH level mean?

PH is actually a spectrum, measured from 0 to 14. On the one end (0.0-6.9), you have “acidic”. On the other (7.0-14.0), you have “alkaline” or “base”. But what does this have to do with your diet?

When you eat something and digest it, your body doesn't absorb everything. You produce what is called “metabolic waste”, or as proponents of the alkaline diet plan call it, “ash”. If you eat high acid foods, the ash will be acidic. If you eat high alkaline foods, the ash will be alkaline.

Scientists do agree that it's important to maintain the relatively alkaline pH of our blood, at 7.365-7.4. The acid-ash diet theory believes that you can better manage your blood pH levels through an alkaline diet.

Furthermore, there are supposedly lots other benefits of having an alkaline body. The diet claims to help you shed some pounds, improve energy levels, and prevent diseases like arthritis, osteoporosis, and diabetes. It also recommends alkaline foods for their cancer-busting properties.

ALKALINE FOOD CHART

The alkaline diet divides food into three categories: acidic, neutral, and alkaline. Acidic foods include red meat, chicken, fish, chocolate, wheat, and alcohol. Neutral foods include natural fats like butter, most oils, milk, and cream. Alkaline foods include most fruits and veggies.

It's not always intuitive. Is vinegar acidic or alkaline? Acidic. Is lemon acidic or alkaline? Surprisingly, alkaline. You can check out alkaline food lists like the one below for guidance.

<h2 style="color: green; text-decoration: underline;">Alkaline Foods</h2> Alkaline—having the properties of an alkali, or containing alkali; having a pH greater than 7
